SENATE UNITES WITH HOUSE TO OPPOSE PINCHOT

Meet to Give Further Impetus to Resentment on Proposals

ONE BILL SURVIVES

Plan Calls for Speed in Passing the Alternate Program

By Leo V. Dolan
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Dec. 9.—(INS.)—United in their opposition to Gov. Gifford Pinchot's unemployment relief program, House and Senate met today to give further impetus to the wave of resentment that swept the original Pinchot proposals to political oblivion last night.

Of three tax proposals submitted to the special session of the Legislature by Governor Pinchot, only one remains with a possible chance of receiving favorable action. The bill proposed tax which the Governor proposed is dead and today the House has before it the negative report of the House ways and means committee on the administration proposal to tax cigarettes at the rate of one cent for each ten cigarettes.

The lone survivor of the trio is the gasoline tax bill sponsored by Representative Richards, Lawrence, which provides for an emergency tax of one cent a gallon. The bill was on the third reading calendar yesterday and today it appeared on the postponed calendar, believed part of a plan involving members of both houses.

Reports today indicate that senators and representatives are discussing a plan to prevent the executive from nullifying the anti-administration bills by a veto.

The plan calls for speedy action in passing the alternative program before Christmas, and declaring a two weeks' Christmas holiday recess. While the session still is in progress, the Governor has only ten days to act on bills the Legislature sends him. The plan would require him to sign or veto them during the Christmas recess.

If vetoed, the bills would return to the two houses at end of the recess, when there would be an opportunity to pass them over his veto, making them laws despite his objection. This plan would necessitate prolonging the session well into January.

Not in a generation has a Pennsylvania Legislature passed a bill over the veto of a Governor. Yesterday's vote in the house, 181 to 16, however, showed a top-heavy majority against the Governor on these bills which indicate possibility of overriding a veto since only 139 votes in the house are needed to upset a gubernatorial disapproval.

Falling in line with the house action to push the anti-administration relief program, the Senate was to hold a brief session today to advance the op-

TODAY'S STORM

HARRISBURG, Dec. 9.—Snow, sleet and rain fell throughout the state early today. 1400 men were called out from the Pennsylvania Department of Highways Maintenance force with 300 trucks. Only 9 of the trucks however were engaged in ploughing. The bulk of the work centered around anti-skid measures. Traffic was considerably slowed down and freezing temperatures indicated difficulty with ice on wind shields. The heaviest snow fall was in Franklin County with three inches while in the rest of Cumberland and Juniata Valley, snow fell from one half to two inches. Sleet predominated in the southwest. The Highway Department recommends care in driving over mountains and at curves.

THE CAT'S ENEMY AND THE CANARY

(By "The Stroller")

A unique form of friendship—between a canary bird and a mouse—has been noted here.

The family of Robert Pearson, North Radcliffe street, had for several days been wondering why quantities of bird seed disappeared so rapidly from the cage. The bird thrived, it is true, but it didn't wax fat. There was a mystery to be solved.

And so one day a member of the family saw a tiny mouse run up the combination flower basket and bird cage, make its way between the wires of the cage, and proceed to enjoy a meal. The bird didn't become excited. It just chirped away naturally to its new-found friend. The mouse finished its meal and down the basket it ran, until time to scamper back for the next "lunch."

The Pearson's had another mouth to feed.

HULMEVILLE

Harold Daseburg, Bellevue avenue, who a few days ago was gunning in Pike County with his brother-in-law and father, of Archbald, returned home with a large buck deer.

A few days are being spent by Mrs. Adeline Kirk, of Middletown Township at the residence of Miss Alice Oliver, Bellevue avenue.

The members of Hulmeville Troop, Boy Scouts of America, will participate in a hike this Saturday. The group will leave Hulmeville at 9 a. m. to be gone eight hours.

Neshamony Lodge, No. 422, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will observe "Home-coming Day" on Friday evening. All members who can possibly do so are asked to attend the session. An excellent entertainment program is being arranged.

Mrs. George Pidcock and Mary Esther Jamison, of Langhorne, were entertained yesterday by Mrs. Pidcock's sister, Mrs. Horace Cox.

DOYLESTOWN POST WANTS DIST. MEETING

Anxious to Entertain Legion
On Next Armistice Day

TO GIVE CHARITY DANCE

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 9.—At the monthly meeting of the A. R. Atkinson Post of the American Legion it was decided to run an American Legion charity dance during Christmas week in the Sixth Regiment Armory, the date of which will be announced tomorrow.

Post Commander James B. Fretz also appointed a committee to make an immediate survey to ascertain what it will cost to stage the ninth district (Bucks-Montgomery county) American Legion parade and meeting in Doylestown on Armistice Day next year, following out the suggestion made at the annual Legion banquet this year by Burgess George S. Hotchkiss.

"We know that Burgess Hotchkiss favors an American Legion celebration in Doylestown on Armistice Day next year and when we have the borough authorities with us, and I understand Council will back us up, we should lose not time in completing arrangements," said Post Commander Fretz.

"It is simply a matter of expense, if the committee finds that the celebration can be staged in Doylestown and finds that the business men will also support us in bringing 10,000 people to town next Armistice Day, all that is necessary is for the committee to submit their report at the January meeting of the Legion and definite action will be taken. It means the raising of probably $500 or more during the next year but it means that a large amount of money will be left in Doylestown if the celebration is staged here."

The committee appointed to make the survey of the district includes Legionnaires W. Carlile Hobensack, A. Russell Thomas, G. Thawley Hayman and District Deputy Commander Samuel E. Spare.

The proceeds of the Legion charity dance that will be staged Christmas week will be donated to the Legion welfare committee, to care for the worthy ex-service men's cases that come before the Legion throughout the year. This committee is badly in need of funds to carry on the work, and the entire membership of the Legion last night pledged support of the charity dance.

The dance committee including A. Russell Thomas, G. Thawley Hayman and W. Carlile Hobensack, is today making arrangements to secure Dave Shuster's dance band, the same organization that furnished music at the Armistice Eve dance this year. The date of the dance may be Wednesday night, December 30, or it may be held on the 31st, New Year's Eve, all depending on the arrangements that can be made today with the band.

Officers of the Doylestown Legion and a number of members of the Post will tomorrow night attend the ninth district meeting in the Lansdale Post rooms when Department Commander George Proesel, of DuBois, and Department Adjutant James Deighan and Eastern Vice-Commander Frank Kanter will be in attendance. There will also be an address by J. J. Andrews, who will talk on "Russia," where he spent two years in a Siberian prison camp and was one of the two survivors of sixty-four who escaped.

Various committees reported last night. The banquet committee especially was praised for the excellent affair staged this year during Armistice week. The Armistice Eve ball was also a success in every detail, including finances.

Dr. Houghton Smith In Charge of Health Clinic

YARDLEY, Dec. 9.—The child health clinic was held this week in the municipal building, with Dr. Houghton Smith in charge, assisted by Mrs. Laura Gilson, the community nurse, and Mrs. Frances B. Barnett and Mrs. H. Stanley Worthington, represented the nurse committee.

Miss Ida Maye Breck, of the Interstate Dairy Council, was present and gave a talk to the mothers present, and served them with soup.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS OF SERVICE TO HUMANITY MARKED BY WASHINGTON CAMP, 789, PATRIOTIC ORDER SONS OF AMERICA, AS BANQUET IS HELD

Rev. Charles Faunce, Member of Bridesburg Camp, Delivers
Address on "Something to Think About"—E. L.
Thomas, District President, Also Speaks

Instituted 21 years ago, Washington Camp, 789, Patriotic Order Sons of America, fittingly observed its coming of age last evening. A banquet was served in St. James's parish house, and a program of entertainment enjoyed by nearly 90 people.

The evening's program included: Singing, "America"; introduction of Toastmaster Chauncey E. Stoneback, Jr., by George B. Whitley; invocation, Rev. Charles Faunce; serving of banquet; remarks by Edward L. Thomas, of Cornwells Heights, president of the Philadelphia-Bucks District, P. O. S. of A.; address by Rev. Faunce, of Camp 129, Bridesburg; greetings by Mrs. Edward L. Thomas, district president of the P. O. S. of A.; play, "The Laziest Man in the World," members of Washington Camp.

Rev. Faunce congratulated the camp on its attainment of "manhood," and its success in 21 years of service. He brought greetings from Bridesburg Camp, and then launched into a spirited address on "Something to Think About."

The aims of the order were referred to, the speaker stressing the following in particular: To inculcate a purer Americanism; to uphold the constitution of the United States of America; to preserve the purity of the ballot; to defend the public school system; opposition to sectarian appropriations; Many Biblical allusions added to the fervor of the talk.

Rev. Faunce likened those things which hinder advancement toward a finer Americanism to barnacles, which cling to the ship of state. "The women can bring America back to the high pinnacle where she belongs" was one of his pertinent remarks, as he urged both men and women to a finer manhood and womanhood and advancement toward the things for which America stands.

Mr. Thomas, the Philadelphia-Bucks district president, told the gathering of the 84 years of continuous service to humanity given by the P. O. S. of A. The organization took effect December 10, 1847. He told of how a regular meeting of the P. O. S. of A. was conducted on a battlefield during the Civil War. "The work flagged somewhat during that big conflict, but the organization quickly came back into a membership of 130,000 was attained in the state of Pennsylvania a few years ago." The amount of good realized from a beneficial and political standpoint was mentioned in the list of activities of this patriotic order.

The short play "The Laziest Man in the World" was well-staged, and thoroughly enjoyed by the men and women present.

TWO WOMEN NARROWLY ESCAPE SERIOUS INJURY

Mrs. Jean Taylor and Mother-in-Law in Crash Near

SEDAN IS DEMOLISHED

Two Andalusia women were painfully injured yesterday afternoon when the car in which they were riding and a truck collided on the Bristol Pike, opposite St. Mark's cemetery.

Injured: Mrs. Jean L. Taylor, 616 Walnut avenue, Andalusia; lacerated incised wound of the top of the head, and a possible fracture of the skull.

Mrs. Sarah Taylor, 616 Walnut avenue, Andalusia; same injuries as her daughter-in-law.

Both women were treated at the Harriman Hospital where they were taken by passersby. Mrs. Jean Taylor was driving.

Frank Hayden, colored, 7262 Chadwick street, Philadelphia, was driver of the truck which is owned by William H. Clausen, 27th and Diamond streets, Philadelphia. The truck was heavily loaded with terra cotta pipe.

Hayden, it is said, who was driving east, turned out of traffic to pass another truck and the left front of his truck struck the Taylor sedan. The entire left side and top were ripped from the sedan and the car was practically demolished.

Sewing Meeting, Bazaar Planned by Yardley Group

YARDLEY, Dec. 9.—The Woman's Guild of the St. Andrew's Episcopal Church will hold a special sewing tomorrow afternoon and evening at the home of Mrs. Francis B. Barnett, to complete arrangements for the bazaar to be held Saturday in Fire House No. 2.

Those assisting Mrs. Barnett with the arrangements include: Mrs. Houghton Smith, Mrs. Joseph Yardley and Mrs. Charles G. Cadwalader and other members of the Guild.

The guild will also hold a bake sale in conjunction with the bazaar, which also includes aprons, household linens, silk lacy and other useful gifts.

GIRL MAGICIAN OF 14 BEGAN CAREER EARLY

Roberta Bryon Has Mystified
Many Audiences
Abroad

HERE ON THURSDAY

Roberta, the girl magician, who will give a performance in "artistic magic" at the meeting of the Fathers' Association in the high school auditorium tomorrow evening, was born in Philadelphia, February 13, 1917, at the age of eleven.

Her father, Robert J. Bryon, Esq., a well-known lawyer of Philadelphia, constructed a little theatre in his home in Elkins Park, and here Roberta practiced until she gained a proficiency that has delighted all those who have witnessed her performances.

Howard Thurston, America's famous magician, after witnessing Roberta's performance before the annual convention of the International Brotherhood of Magicians at Fort Wayne, Indiana, in 1930, pronounced her "a real artist," and later introduced her over the radio to the public at large.

Last summer Roberta and her sister, Marion, who assists her in her performance, made their first trip abroad, accompanied by their father and mother. In Europe, Roberta was welcomed and received by the most critical audiences. She gave performances in France, Scotland and England.

In Paris, Roberta appeared before the Syndicat International des Artistes Prestidigitateurs. In Glasgow, she was feted by the Scottish Conjurers Association. At Cheltenham, England, she had conferred upon her the title of "Life Member No. 1, by the British Ring International Brotherhood of Magicians."

In London, Roberta gave a stellar performance under the auspices of the Magicians' Club of London, before the leading conjurers of Great Britain and members of the British Magic Circle and the Magicians' Club; and on that occasion she was made a member and also presented with the gold medal of the Magicians' Club by Will Goldston, the world's foremost magical author.

This is a brief resume of the accomplishments of this young lady since she has taken up the study of magic. The kindness of her parents in bringing her to Bristol, to perform before the Fathers' Association, should be duly appreciated by the members and should insure for her a large audience.

Five hundred children from the grade schools will be present to witness the performance. The presence of the four hundred members of the Fathers' Association, will fill the auditorium to capacity. President Runyan announces that the meeting will be called to order promptly at 8 o'clock.

Offered for Sale

By "Gift Seeker"

The second day of shopping is finished, and I have twice as many gifts purchased as I had this morning. It won't be long before we hear the cherub sing—angelic ones and earthly ones too.

I know one little cherub, just a dear, who will go into ecstasies on the morning of the 25th. All because I stopped at Steinberg's, 213 Mill street, today. And when I came out I had a big package under my arm. It contained a little coat of imitation broad-tail. The main color was tan, the trimming being in pointed brown. The insert of the same material. It looks so soft and warm, and Jean is going to find that it keeps her dandy and warm. The soft collar extends in a scarf-like end to the waist in front.

The belt is of leather. Articles of clothing for tots these days are fine replicas of some of the garments Mother wears. And when Mr. Steinberg showed me a pair of tan gloves that just seemed to match the color of the coat, I couldn't resist.

Our house is to receive its usual gift this year. And when they ask my opinion, if they do, I'll speak right up, telling Dad and Mother of the electric washing machine and electric ironers at the Radcliffe street office of Philadelphia Electric Company. The A B C Spinner now shown in the window is a dandy. And I just happened to think, that regardless of its many fine features it is just fine for Christmas for it is finished in an attractive green, with lettering in red. Right alongside of it is a Simplex (Continued on Page 6)

PRESIDENT ADVOCATES TAX RAISING IN HIS ANNUAL BUDGET MEASURE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 9.—A two-year tax increase that will dig deeply into every American's pocket was proposed to Congress by President Hoover when he submitted the 1933 budget disclosing some treasury deficits of $3,630,000,000 for the current and next fiscal years.

The president recommended putting Federal taxes back on the 1924 basis. The increase would be applicable to this year's income. Simultaneously, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon supplied details of the administration plan which really goes far beyond the 1924 tax law by proposing the revival of some old and the addition of some new nuisance taxes applicable to telephone and telegraph messages, bank checks, etc. Income and corporation taxes would go sharply upward, while for those who escaped these, there would be the nuisance tax affecting the daily business and diversions of almost every citizen.

An increase in the cigarette tax and tax on small admission tickets would assure that no one could totally escape contributing to the Federal government.

Normal income tax rates would be 2, 4 and 6 per cent, instead of 1%, 3 and 5. Exemptions would be lowered, too, in order to bring some 1,700,000 citizens back into the income tax paying class.

"We cannot maintain public confidence nor stability of the Federal Government," the President said in his budget measure, "without undertaking some temporary tax increase. I recommend that Congress provide for an increase in taxation for a definite limited period and upon the general plan of the act of 1924 with such changes as may be appropriate in the light of allied conditions."

"It is proposed that this increase shall be definitely terminated two years from next July. This plan, it is estimated, will realize $902,000,000 next year and thus meet conditions of balancing the budget for the fiscal year of 1933, except for statutory debt retirement."

"The public has paid such taxes in the past," the President continued, "and has found them not intolerable and has found they do not prevent increased prosperity."

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn assisted the witness in his explanation when he gave his opinion that it was probably during the period of "full moon that Bradford had the worst temper."

William H. Satterthwaite, Doylestown, who represented Bradford, asked the Court to be lenient with Bradford because of the fact that the affair was more or less of a drunken brawl and that Bradford's war record was excellent and worthy of consideration when pronouncing sentence.

"You are lucky that you are not here on a charge of murder," Judge Keller said to Bradford. "You gave him a deep gash over the head and then stabbed him. The Court will take your war record into consideration and what your counsel has said, and will be more lenient probably than the Court should be."

"The sentence is that on the charge of possessing liquor you pay a fine of $100 and costs, and on the charges of aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery you pay a fine of $25 and costs and serve from four months to three years in the county prison."

Ira Wiltshire, of Bristol, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor at his home in Bristol when it was raided by Bristol police. A quantity of home-brewed beer was seized. Wiltshire was released upon payment of costs and was placed on probation for one year, the prison sentence being suspended.

"I do not like to see young men like you go to jail," Judge Keller told Wiltshire. Pastor Says War Gas Makes DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 9.—Ottis Bradford, thirty-six, a veteran of the Argonne drive during the World War, staged a party at his home in Langhorne on November 14 when he specked one of his party guests by speeding him over the head with a jar of tomatoes and then stabbed him with a penknife.

Yesterday in criminal court, Bradford, who is employed as a car cleaner by the Reading Company in Philadelphia, was convicted of aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery upon his friend, Leslie Price. Bradford pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing some home-brewed beer and wine, and a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill was nolleprossed by the District Attorney.

Morrisville State Police were called to the Bradford home and there found Price covered with blood. Corporal Stewart testified that Bradford admitted to him that he had struck Price over the head with a glass jar and had cut him with a knife when he refused to leave his home and continually bothered his wife.

Mrs. Bradford is a domestic employed by a Langhorne family. Bradford, who was gassed in Argonne drive, admitted himself on the witness stand that he struck Price.

"I had taken several drinks but was not drunk," Bradford testified. "I certainly did not mean to kill Price but I wanted him to leave my house. It was early in the morning and my wife could not get to sleep with all the noise that was being made by Price."

The officers found forty-two bottles of home brewed beer and some home-made wine in the Bradford house.

A Negro minister from Langhorne, who was Bradford's character witness, testified that the man bore two reputations.

"I have heard that he is a law abiding and peaceful citizen as I know him, and then I have heard that because of the gas he received in the war, that when the moon is in certain phases, he becomes afflicted with a high temper."

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn assisted the witness in his explanation when he gave his opinion that it was probably during the period of "full moon that Bradford had the worst temper."

BENEFITS WIDESPREAD

Against professional sports and even against amateur sports as exemplified in college games, it is urged sometimes that the benefits are confined to too narrow a class, that the players are the only ones who get the exercise which justifies indulgence in such activities. This position is hardly tenable. While the players occupy the center of the stage when the games are in progress, in some instances the efforts made by the spectators to be present involve more personal exertion than is expended by those taking part in the sports. The long vigil kept by no small number of persons of both sexes in order to secure tickets for the World's Series is indicative of what a non-player may be called on to endure in baseball.

In the matter of college football certainly there is no want of activity on the part of the student body not members of the squad. With the "pep" meetings and parades in advance of the games and the jubilation of the victors after a game, it cannot be sustained that whatever benefit exercise affords is withheld from the non-players. Observations of college sports would seem to bear out the statement that those not on the team get rather more of it than those who play. The latter are rather carefully guarded, while there is not much restraint placed on the former, other than what the human frame can endure. In the matter of celebrating a victory over a hated rival there apparently is not much limit to the endurance.

The roars that go up from the grandstand in applause of a brilliant play offer evidence that even spectators may exert themselves, though they do it in a manner at variance with the players. It might be desirable to have direct part in games more widely distributed, but it cannot be successfully contended that spectators do not get a deal of exercise too.

THE PEACE AWARD

Two Americans, Jane Addams and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, are among those whose names are mentioned in connection with this year's Nobel peace prize award. The Norwegian press considers both likely winners.

Miss Addams is a woman of distinction in many fields and one whose work has been repeatedly recognized. Last May she received the M. Carey Thomas award for American women of eminent achievement. She has advanced the cause of the world peace by mobilizing woman's influence, the world over against war, and has greatly strengthened the forces of international good will by her work in behalf of disarmament and settlement of international disputes by arbitration.

Doctor Butler is eligible because of his work, internationally recognized, for arbitration and armament reduction mainly through the Carnegie endowment which he has made a potent influence toward these ends.

Five Americans have been awarded the Nobel peace prize. These awards were to former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Woodrow Wilson and Charles C. Dawes. All were made for concrete services rendered to the cause of world peace.

CHAPTER LXII

Isham on the drive here had thrown light on something that had puzzled him—why Martell and Sant should have troubled to stage-manage for his benefit the supposed kidnapping of a man who for weeks had been a prisoner in their hands.

"They had come to realize that some one had lately been watching in the grounds at Beggar's Court, to worry 'em—I had more than one near shave of being caught," Isham had said, "though they never suspected that the spy was the newcomer with the crutches. They couldn't know what that unknown spy had learned or suspected—and to pretend that Severn had turned up at Beggar's Court and had then been kidnapped, with all that circumstantial detail for your benefit, the S. O. S. on the mirror and so forth, was merely to throw dust in the eyes of Severn's friends should they begin to suspect foul play."

LIGHT

It was as they made their way through the dark grounds, now an overgrown wilderness, that a sudden startled exclamation broke from Jim Wynter.

"My hat! So that's it!"

"What is it Jim?" asked Bill Grayson.

His friend was staring at the lily pond that had broken upon his eyes in a corner of the wooded grounds, faintly touched by moonlight. The pond had long since become tangled up with tall-growing weeds and rushes—so tall as almost to hide an ornamental stone figure in the center that of a boy holding in his arms a dolphin with wide gaping jaws.

"Look Bill! That dolphin—the fish Severn meant in his sketch, of course!" Jim whispered excitedly. "And I'll swear that inside that fish is the hiding place of the treasure!"

Word had been passed to the watching men to let Martell and Sant, when they arrived on the scene make their way unchecked to the lily pond. In the shadow of the trees beyond Haste and the others reached waiting for their quarry to come into the trap.

For as Jim had divined, and as Sant would certainly have guessed with his first sight of the letter stolen in last night's raid on Manorways, this stone fish held the key to the secret. Thrilled with sudden eager excitement, Jim had hardly had the patience to wait until a plank could be brought to form a bridge over the pond to the carved figures in the center.

"Still safe," the diving man's last message to Severn had run. Would he find those jewels still safe now?

From the bank the others had watched him thrust down his hand between the gaping jaws of the dolphin. There was a moment of waiting suspense; then triumphantly Jim had drawn out the small casket containing the Czarina Rubies and the other Murinov heirlooms from where Federoff by Severn's instructions had hidden them.

There was a thrill for Jim Wynter as his fingers touched the casket and his eyes rested on those historic stones of marvelous beauty that ten long years before on that night of fate Katharine's grandfather, Prince Alexis Murinov, had saved from the cataclysm threatening his house. Those jewels that Federoff had guarded so devotedly at the cost of his life.

That his murderers would ever be traced and brought to justice now was something they could not hope for. Probably after their fruitless search these men had realized that their victim from Russia was utterly beyond their reach.

ELATION

What a wonderful night this had been, Jim Wynter was telling himself as they lay waiting there. A night of nights!

Frank Severn found—his enemies likely soon to be overtaken at last by the feet of justice—and Katharine's jewels recovered, to lift her at a stride from poverty to a fortune.

Still no sign of Sant or Martell. Haste's face and Isham's alike betrayed a tuning suspense. But Jim's confidence was unabated.

"They'll come," he said with conviction. "I can't tell you why—I just know they'll come!"

It was strange to think that this casket in his pocket was like the last link between the girl he loved and a part of her life now forever closed.

That long line of ancestors, her mother's people, who for countless generations had played a great part in Russia's history, and on one of which a Czarina had bestowed that royal gift—their glories and their greatness all gone now. Vanished like the smoke of yesterday—forgotten, desolate, ruined, their proud ancestral home of centuries—and of their name no one left.

And Katharine's own lost career—that thought too crept in pitifully among these crowding thoughts—that gift cruelly snatched away from her at the very zenith of her success.

But she had given her future into his keeping—and he would wrap her life around with such love and tenderness that in their happiness to come the poignancy of that deep bitterness she had known should pass. Jim Wynter vowed himself to that task.

The minutes had dragged by as they waited there. Fifteen minutes—twenty—half an hour. Then suddenly they heard the faint rustle of stealthily approaching footsteps. In the half darkness they saw two figures creeping up toward the lily pond. Jim could see the glint in Isham's eyes.

In his impatient haste Sant did not wait to remove his shoes. He waded into the shallow pond, more mud than water, towards the half-hidden stone fish—and then came a sudden rush from cover of the waiting men.

At the first sound of pocket, Martell's hand darted to his pocket. A revolver flashed into his hand. It was touch and go for Isham then, in front even of Haste in his eagerness. Isham was just in time to knock aside Martell's gun-wrist as the latter was pulling the trigger.

There was a sharp report and a sudden scream—a scream from Sant, and Isham's arms were holding Martell.

Sant had not to be held—Sant who had received that deflected bullet, he crashed forward among the rushes, dead as he fell.

Haste snapped the handcuffs on Martell's wrists.

"Do you remember Elsie March, Martell?" Isham said to the silent white-faced man, his voice pitiless, ice-cold. "It was what you did to that girl who fell into your trap in Buenos Aires that first set vengeance creeping on your track—that has brought you to justice at last—to the hangman's rope that's waiting for you!"

It was late, very late, when they got back to Manorways, but both Katharine and Milly had been far too excited to think of going to bed.

"And how's Frank?" was Jim's first eager question.

"He's conscious now—and the doctor says it's only a question of time before he's all right again," Katharine told him. "Of course, he's been kept under drugs so long, weakening him terribly—and that has to be got out of his system. But Dr. Causton assures us there's nothing to worry about now. Isn't it wonderful? I feel so excited and happy, Jim!"

In the sick room Frank Severn, with an effort, held out a wasted hand to Jim and Bill Grayson.

"I've been making them tell me all the news—and hearing how you've been working to trace me, Jim, old chap, you and Grayson," Severn said with a ghost of a smile. "I've had a pretty bad time of course—but that's all over, thanks to good friends as I've had."

SPORTSMANSHIP

For a moment the thin voice paused.

"And I heard about you and Katharine, Jim—good luck and all the best, old chap!" he went on. "I'm a bit of a crock now—but anyway I ought to be well enough to be best man at your wedding!"

Katharine's face was turned away. There were sudden tears in her eyes. She knew how unselfishly generous Frank Severn's smiling words were.

He had loved her herself—only the woman he cared for was not for him. And Katharine knew that no shadow of envy or resentment colored his feeling towards the friend who had won what was denied to him.

"And here are your jewels, Katharine!"

Jim spread them out on the bed—those stones of breath-taking beauty, that for ten years had lain with their fires quenched in the dark in their secret hiding place near Murinov Castle, which Severn and Federoff had risked so much to regain for this girl staring down at him now with rapt eyes.

"Oh, Frank—and you, too, Jim—but I haven't words to thank you," she whispered brokenly.

Milly's cheery voice came to break the moment's tension:

"And we've won our gamble, Jimmy!"

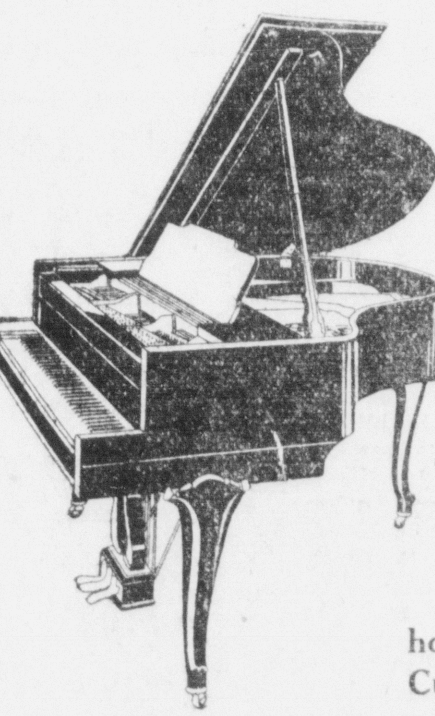

"Sure," said Bill with a grin.

And Jim laughed and nodded.

But he was thinking that—though things seemed hardly to have turned out fairly for Frank Severn, who had risked so much more than he—had won something as a thousand times more worth while, as he looked into the lovely smiling face and met Katharine's happy radiant eyes.

frequently and got drunk and then complaints were made against your place. Possibly you sold it to them, but I'll take your word that nothing was sold."

John MacLaren, of Andalusia Manor, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Keller to a charge of possessing a half-barrel of beer at his place when it was raided by County Detective Antonio Russo. A fine of $100 and costs was imposed and a prison sentence of 30 days was suspended. MacLaren, who had been in court on a similar charge four years ago, was placed on probation for a period of two years. MacLaren told the Court that a friend of his brought the beer from Trenton for a party.

Manuel Valley, 28, of Bethlehem, whose profession back in Spain was that of bull-fighter, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Keller to a charge of manufacturing and possessing liquor in "the swamps" section of Bridgeton township where he had purchased a still for $500 from a Bethlehem man.

Valley, who formerly worked for a steel company in Bethlehem, told Judge Keller that he paid $200 for the still on a down payment, and was to pay off the other $300 in liquor made in the still. He had been at the plant but four days when it was raided by Doylestown State Police.

Judge Keller imposed a fine of $300 and costs and gave him a prison sentence of two months.

Sam Taylor, of Philadelphia, who pleaded guilty to a charge of transporting 100 gallons of alcohol from Trenton to Philadelphia, was fined $250 and costs by Judge Keller yesterday. A prison sentence of two months was suspended. Taylor told the Court that he was hired to go to Trenton to get a load of "cleaning fluid."

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

VISITING A LONE SHEEP-HERDER

TWO summers ago, I was invited to spend a summer in Montana, on a ranch. One of the most interesting experiences of the summer was a trip far up into the hills, when my host and I took supplies of bacon, butter and tobacco to a lone sheep-herder.

We rode for many hours up to the sheep ranch leading our pack train up steep, narrow mountain trails, till we reached the green pastures where the sheep were feeding. The grass was fresh and abundant — important items in sheep raising. Sheep must be fed on the greenest of pastures, if we are to have lamb of the best quality and flavor.

Have you ever paid a call on one of these lone scouts of the food industry—a man who spends most of his life miles from the sound of a human voice?

That evening, when the meal was over we settled around the fire, and the sheep herder told us tales of the mountains. He allowed himself the greatest of all luxuries, for him — talk with other human beings.

When the fire had died down, we crawled into our sleeping bags, and fell asleep under the stars, to the sound of the low plaintive calls of the thousands of sheep around us. They staged a cattle round-up while I was out West too. That was exciting—branding the new calves. We started early in the morning. A ranch out in the West often runs to around thirty thousand acres, you know, and that's a good deal of ground to cover, when you're hunting for cows and calves. When the branding was over luncheon was called—a luncheon of home-grown T-bone steaks, broiled to a juicy turn over the open fire.

In the late afternoon, we rode back to the ranch house, across the plains. The sky was shot with the colors of the sunset.

"Isn't that beautiful?" I asked one of the cow-punchers.

"Yeah," he said earnestly. "It's just plumb peaceful."

And here is the recipe for a Western dish: shepherd's pie—you'll need three pounds of lamb—neck, shank, or breast. Rub the meat well with flour. Brown it in a little fat, add two onions, cook until the onions turn yellow. Stir often to prevent scorching. Then add a pint of hot water and simmer for about 45 minutes. Next, add two carrots, and continue the cooking until the meat is tender. Take the meat out of the broth, remove the bones, and put the meat back in the broth. Thicken with a little flour and water. Season with salt and pepper.

Line the sides of a greased baking dish with mashed potatoes. Fill the center of the dish with the meat mixture, and cover the top with mashed potatoes. Pour a little melted butter over the top of the pie, and bake in a moderately hot oven until the potatoes are brown and the pie is hot through. Serve at once, in the baking dish. Or shepherd's pie can be made with left-over lamb if you wish.

Just ONE Question..

"HOW GOOD ARE THEY?" — THAT'S WHAT SMOKERS WANT TO KNOW ABOUT CIGARETTES

SMOKERS, nowadays, aren't taking things for granted. They're shopping around... asking questions.

Old man habit has been discarded... forgotten. "How good is it?"... that's what they want to know about any cigarette they smoke.

"HOW good is it?" Brother, you put your finger right on it!

You want a cigarette that's milder. You want a cigarette that tastes better. You want a pure cigarette. And above all, you want cigarettes that satisfy.

Now when you say that, you're talking Chesterfield's language—none other!

IT STARTS with fine tobacco. Chesterfield buyers are experts in the art of judging quality leaf. They can spot the finest tobacco in any country... and they won't take anything else.

You'll find the same painstaking care... the same skillful handling... in the curing, the blending, and the cross-blending.

Blended and cross-blended... that's Chesterfield! And what a difference it makes in the way it smokes and tastes!

FROM field to package, Chesterfields are protected by the strictest purity standards; the most modern sanitary manufacturing methods.

They're rolled in the finest, whitest paper... that burns without taste or odor. Wrapped in a clean, attractive package... neat, fresh-looking; moisture-tight... but easy to open.

And delivered as fast as they're made... from 3 big factories... to every cigarette counter in the land.

THAT'S the story of why Chesterfields satisfy. That's the reason they're milder... that's why they taste better. Light up... and answer your own question!

"No question about it - They really Satisfy"

Yardley Scoutmaster Visits Troop No. 2, Here

The regular weekly meeting of Troop 2, Boy Scouts, was held on Monday evening at 7.30 p. m. in St. James's parish house. At this meeting the very impressive investiture ceremony was conducted by the scoutmaster, officially welcoming Scout William Betz, of Edgely, into the ranks of Troop 2.

Scoutmaster Penman, of Yardley, attended the meeting, accompanied by three of his troop officers, to observe a standard patrol system in operation. Troop 2 has established a very fine system of this kind under the direct supervision of Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Melvin Cox, Senior Patrol Leader William Warner and Eagle Scouts Robert Wright and George Herman. Scoutmaster Penman and his boys visited each patrol in turn, and received many useful pointers which will aid them in establishing a similar system in their own troop.

Ship Committeemen Charles Heller and Mate Fred Herman, of Seascent Ship "Elk," were on hand to explain to the members of the troop the purpose of the Seascent Reserves, and six scouts were chosen from the ranks who will endeavor to pass the necessary tests which will entitle them to the rank of cabin boy. The S. S. Elk is the first ship in Bucks county to attempt to establish the Seascent Reserves, and the scouts of this locality are very much interested in the movement.

Chairman Frank Wight and Troop Committeemen C. Russell Ellis and Walter E. Leonberger attended the meeting, and Mr. Wight announced the glad news of a Christmas party to be held on Monday night, December 21st, at 8 o'clock. Deputy Commissioner David Neill awarded the troop a gold seal for their work during the month of November.

The meeting closed with a reading of the West Point Cadet Prayer by Scoutmaster John Healey, who pointed out the very close resemblance to the Boy Scout Oath.

All members are asked to be present at the next meeting, Monday evening, December 14, when final plans for the Christmas party will be discussed.

De Caro Talks Himself Back Into Jail Again

A man who has often been in police court circles, James DeCaro, talked himself into jail last night when he attempted to dictate to Justice James Guy how the court should be conducted. DeCaro had just been freed at a court trial in Doylestown yesterday, where he stood trial for attacking his wife, with whom he does not live. After being freed of his wife's allegations DeCaro was promptly rearrested on a warrant sworn to by Marco Mauro, 1017 Elm street, and his wife, Margaret.

Mauro charged DeCaro with surety of the peace but the evidence was weak and DeCaro would undoubtedly have been released, but when asked if he desired to testify in his own behalf, he replied that he did.

"Clear the court," said DeCaro, "and I'll tell my story." He then intimated that the testimony which he desired to give was of such a nature that those assembled, particularly a 15-year old girl, should not hear it.

DeCaro became more or less dictatorial and assumed the role of "hard-boiled."

"Well, I'll hold you in $1,000 bail for court," said Judge Guy, "and you can tell your story to the court."

When a bondsman, approached County Detective Antonio Russo came forward and said that he intended to take DeCaro back to court for violation of his parole.

DeCaro was charged with invading the home of Mauro and ordering some visitors who were there to leave the house and also sending Mauro himself out to procure something to drink.

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL.
Copyright, 1931, Premier Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 9.—"On every side you hear praise of Jackie Cooper for his performances in 'Skiway' and 'The Champ'. But where will he be five years from now?"

This is a query addressed to me by a New York motion picture fan. Naturally, I can't give the answer, for who can predict the fate of a child actor. It is possible, however, to examine the records of other youthful stars.

One who has come back and made a name for herself is Madge Evans. In the old days, Madge acted for the World Film Co. Now she is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and, if you please, is one of the most charming leading women on the screen.

Ben Alexander is working again in juvenile roles ("All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Are These Our Children?"). Anita Louise bridged the gap between child actress and ingenue. Jackie Coogan, with one more to do at Paramount, has accomplished the unusual feat of enjoying two vogues as a child performer.

Mary Kornman, of Hal Roach's "Our Gang," is going to school, but works occasionally in the studio. Emina, a colleague, is in vaudeville. So are Jane and Katherine Lee, who used to work for Fox. Virginia Lee Corbin is married and, I believe, is in Europe now.

A reference to the casting directories discloses that Wesley Barry still is available, though you seldom hear of him in a picture. As for baby Marie Osborne and baby Peggy Montgomery, they seem to have dropped out of sight completely.

You may argue, and I am of the same mind, that Jackie Cooper is a much finer actor than any of these other child stars. Therefore, he may survive the awkward age and go right on to juvenile roles. In any event, the boy who played the "Champ's" Kid should not fade permanently from the screen horizon.

IT'S STILL GOOD.

Bert Wheeler's famous gag was revived the other day by Robert Montgomery and had the actors rocking with laughter.

It was a scene in "Courage," Montgomery and Madge Evans were sitting in a drab little room, and he was confessing to being a failure. One by one they recited their tribulations.

Suddenly, a light went over with a loud crash. Montgomery, "Yes," sighed. "and even the mice are after us."

LILY SUBSTITUTES.

Now that Fifi Dorsay has stepped out of the French version of "One Hour With You," Lily Damita has been signed to replace her. The part, played by Genevieve Tobin in the English version, was declared to be too suave for the impetuous Fifi. Chevalier, of course, is the star of the film, both in English and French.

FIGURED OUT NEW RACKET.

Sculptress Jean Willdenrath has an idea that will make money for her. She is doing miniature busts of the stars, which later will be reproduced in large numbers and sold to theatres for souvenirs. The images are only four inches in height. So far 20 have been completed. According to the sculptress, George Arliss has been her easiest subject to date and Ann Harding her most difficult. She spent two weeks on the tiny image of the Pathe star.

In case you don't identify Miss Willdenrath, she and Sally James Farnham did that equestrian figure of Simon Bolivar in Central Park, New York.

ironer, and to operate it is "simplex" they say. The whole family will benefit, too, for the laundry will be done in short order and it will be neatness personified.

Another place I halted to gaze in the windows was at Dries' Furniture

Store, Mill and Pond streets, this morning. Since Mabel has just gone to house-keeping I think she will be most keen about the mirror I bought for her as a Christmas gift. It is a tripe mirror, the three portions being neatly hinged together. The center part is slightly higher than the two sides. It will look well over Mabel's new console table in her hall. Of course I'm out to buy gifts to give other people, but on the side I'm keeping my eyes open for things I'd like people to give me. If anyone asks what I desire it won't take long for me to tell them about the bed-room set at Dries' that I have my mind on. There is a bed-spread and pillow of rose-colored rayon, attractively ruffled and frilled, and on top of the large pillow are a variety of colored flowers. Then there is a rose bed-lamp, and a pair of rose-colored glass electric lamps with shades in silk to match. These latter measure about one-foot in height, and they'll look just fine on my dresser.

A pair of shoe buckles, rectangular in shape, set with brilliants—won't they just finish off my black moire dance slippers. Just what I've been wanting for the holiday "prom." And Moffo's had them at 311 Mill street, as I thought they would. I placed them on my slippers after I reached home today, and now I can't wait to hear the orchestra tune up. While I was at Moffo's I asked to see galoshes, for my sister Marie says she needs a pair and desires useful gifts this year. So her gift is safely wrapped. The galoshes I decided on are of dark brown rubber, with four snaps up the front. The lining is a warm material in stripes of tan and blue, and a neat turn-down cuff furnishes the finishing touch.

My shopping wouldn't be so far advanced. I hardly believe, if these store-keepers of our town didn't have such an array of stock. I'll give them three cheers anytime.

Stop Night Coughing

Night coughing is almost always caused by an irritated, inflamed throat; so is almost all coughing. Ordinary cough syrups do not reach these conditions, but Thoxine, a prescription exclusively for throat troubles, does. It relieves the irritation and the cough stops within 15 minutes. And Thoxine goes further, too. It eliminates the internal cause which many times develops into serious illness.

A swallow of Thoxine before retiring absolutely prevents night coughing and insures a good night's sleep. It gives the same speedy relief for sore throat, too. It contains no chloroform or other harmful drugs, and children like it. Relief is guaranteed within 15 minutes or money back. 35c, 60c, and $1.00 bottles. LOOKING back at the golf panorama of 1931 there is one fact that stands out clearly and sharply—and that is that it will be many years—if ever—before we have another Bobby Jones! The Atlanta wizard's withdrawal from competition left a void which many golfing satellites sought to fill—in vain. Not one star of the links succeeded in capturing two major titles.

Tommy Armour, veteran pro, made a valiant attempt to emulate Jones. He succeeded in capturing the British Open title, but failed dismally in continuing his successful march on this side of the ocean. But then Jones' super-achievement of four major titles in one year is something to shoot at—and probably will be for many years to come.

However, 1931 did produce three young golfing stars who climbed to the heights in major tournaments. First there is pretty Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, N. Y., who clinched her brief competitive career by winning the Women's National Golf Championship. This sturdy twenty-year-old girl, rated one of the longest hitters in the game, de-throned Glenna Collett Vare, five-time champion, after a spectacular 36-hole struggle. After only two years of major campaigning Helen's victory in the Women's National Championship was a noteworthy feat and seems to indicate a long tenure of office as the champion woman golfer of America.

Then we have Tom Creavy, youthful professional of Buffalo, N. Y., whose brilliant playing vanquished the foremost pro golfers of the country and won for him the P. G. A. title. Creavy, twenty years old, came through in a tournament which veteran professionals look upon as the toughest of all major championships. Veteran campaigners the nick of the professional field, fell before the wizardry of the Creavy putter. "One Put" Creavy, they called him, and they were right. For the youngster hung up a record of twenty-one one-put greens in a day's play of thirty-six holes.

Last we have Billy Burke, New England's professional star, whose sensational links battle with George Von Elm, the businessman golfer, in the American Open event, will go down in history as one of the longest and toughest ever played. Seventy-two holes these two played before Burke emerged a victor by the slim margin of two strokes. And those seventy-two holes followed immediately after the regulation seventy-two holes of play, which found Burke and Von Elm tied for first honors. Then came the sensational play-off.

Well, even Bobby Jones would have difficulty duplicating that feat.
